"I took a trip and now everything is all messed up and I don't know how to fix it. I'm going to die if I don't fix it. I'm not even really here." When a young man discovers that his father is a murderer, he goes back in a time machine -The Rainbox - to change his history. But when he returns home, he's standing over the body of a drowned little boy who looks just like him. He confronts the man who was his father but all has changed in this reality. No one knows him, no one believes him, and fate is determined to repeat events if he can't alter destiny one more time . . .
