If you've had enough of characters who are young, slim, and beautiful, then Molly Meagher (that's Ma-HAR, not Meeger) will make you smile. She's short, plump and senior, and trouble homes in on her like a heat-seeking missile. A "recovering" lawyer, wanna-be Yooper, EMT, and general smart aleck, Molly attracts villains like honey attracts flies. Fortunately, she has friends – also senior citizens both male and female -- who have her back, and her sort-of squeeze, retired FBI agent turned security consultant, to rub it for her. What with dodging assassins, planning for a knitting shop, caring for a dying sister, driving an ambulance, and doing the occasional court-appointed lawyering, Molly doesn't have time to think about the fact that she's closer to seventy than to sixty, or that she really ought to get rid of the doughnuts and cheesecake from years ago she's still carrying around her waist. Her indomitable spirit and wisecracking approach to life help her cope with a life that is anything but boring. Join Molly and the denizens of Michigan's Upper Peninsula as she juggles drama, adventure, nightmares, and grief, and like a Timex, keeps on ticking.
