THE Roman world is in chaos following the suicide of Emperor Nero in AD68. The Silure tribe of eastern Wales intends to take advantage of it by attacking the Gloucester area during the following spring. An Irish chief decides to raid Hywel's home while its warriors are away in support of the Silures. Hywel is now 14 and a qualified warrior. He plunges headlong into the confusion and, after a series of traumatic experience, brings off a brilliant coup. This exciting story captures the atmosphere of tribal life and conflicting loyalties in a Wales under threat of invasion.
