Too innocent to survive, too evil to die ... the wilderness doesn't care. Unconventional, fast paced, no holds barred. It may take you places you'd rather not go ... but in the end, it's worth the ride. Sixteen-year old Amy escapes her captors in the rugged Sierra foothills, only to discover freedom's steep price. Billionaire Jacob Chandler turns fugitive in the same hostile chaparral, risking his life to stop it from spiraling out of control. But the wilderness isn't their only enemy.

Amy's kidnapers want her back and won't let anyone stand in their way.

Ripples has been called a dead sprint from cover to cover. Take a deep breath and hang on. You might not breathe again until your ride is over. Bestselling author DL Fowler gets inside people's heads and takes readers along for the ride. He spent much of his youth backpacking through the San Gorgonio Wilderness Area and Sierra Mountains, and earned a bachelor's degree in Humanities/English from the University of Southern California. His MBA studies at California State University-San Bernardino focused on human behavior. A career in financial counseling gave him ample opportunity to gain a deep understanding of how various people operate in stressful situations.
