Waking to discover his girlfriend has dumped him and his billionaire father is dead, Dominic heads home to New York and into a snake pit; his siblings envy him, his extended family wants his inheritance, his father's associates are trying to strap a ball and chain on him and somebody threatens his life in his own home. Unable to bear the pressure, he flees to Sicily to be reunited with his cousin, but has been pursued by Mafia minions of his uncles, the CIA who want to question him in relation to a cyber-terrorist attack and an organization of assassins called The Firm which has been hired by an enraged executive to do his dirty work. When several CIA agents are killed, the blame is placed firmly upon Dominic and the hunt for his scalp intensifies, putting him in a dark corner. Fortunately, he is not alone. On his side are his father's mysterious security chief, a British Intelligence agent who becomes inadvertently entangled in their plight and a gifted software programmer who is loyal to his friend. With the CIA and The Firm sniffing every nook and war zones being created all over Europe, Dominic must continue his journey to no where. Accosted from almost every angle and with no one above suspicion of wanting him dead, his only hope is to survive long enough to get home, but in a world where everything is determined by random happenstance, can he get there before someone succeeds?
