What happens when the dream dies with a partner? After 38 years of marriage, Peter and Glenora Doherty embarked on their life's dream of sailing around the world on their own boat. Three years into the voyage, Peter passed away suddenly and unexpectedly. Glenora not only lost him, she lost her cruising lifestyle and her liveaboard home. Her dreams were shattered. She no longer knew who she was or where she was going. This inspirational and uplifting book will provide practical and comforting advice to anyone who has lost a spouse. There are helpful "Steps to Survival" at the end of each chapter and suggestions about planning ahead for dealing with the death of a spouse, particularly for offshore sailors.

To illustrate her voyage, Glenora reflects frequently on the challenges and joys of cruising under sail.
